

Peace regards the Rules of People.
Utmost Peace regards the Rule of All.

Many traditions have arisen to answer this.
There cannot be this Peace from them without Peace between them.
Respectful discussion, experienced tuition, and travel are encouraged.

Here is a brief selection of some texts of major differing traditions:

Hinduism : The Bhagavad Gita

(Online: vedabase.io; Free tr. (1885) by Edwin Arnold)
Georg Feuerstein (tr.) (2014), The Bhagavad-Gita: A New Translation; Shambhala.

Buddhism : The Dhammapada

(Online: wisdomlib.org; Free tr. (1881) by Max Müller)
K. R. Norman (tr.) (1997), The Word of the Doctrine (Dhammapada); Pali Text Society.

Taoism : The Tao Te Ching

(Online: thetaoteching.com; Free tr. (1891) by James Legge)
D. C. Lau (tr.) (1974), Tao Te Ching; Penguin.

Confucianism : The Analects

(Online: MIT Classics; Free tr. (1861) by James Legge)
D. C. Lau (tr.) (1979) The Analects; Penguin Classics.

Judaism : The Tanakh

(Online: sefaria.org; Free tr. (1919) published by The Jewish Publication Society)
Adele Berlin, Marc Zvi Brettler, Michael Fishbane (eds.) (2003),
The Jewish Study Bible; Oxford University Press.

Christianity : The Bible

(Online: bible.com, Free tr. (1611) commissioned by James VI and I)
Michael Coogan, Marc Brettler, Carol Newsom, Pheme Perkins (eds.) (2018),
The New Oxford Annotated Bible with Apocrypha (5th ed.); Oxford University Press.

Islam : The Quran

(Online: quran.com, Free tr. (1861) by J. M. Rodwell)
M. A. S. Abdel Haleem (tr.) (2005) “The Qu’ran”; Oxford University Press.

Find throughout them the reasons to live:

Health | Truth | Love | Beauty | Peace